VIRGINIANS AND THE CURRENCY BILL.

The new currency bill is a very complex document and has lent itself to the "funny man" who has depicted the father, stumped by his 12-year-old son, who, preparing a paper on current events asks:

"Father, tell me about the currency bill."

Father replies: "The currency bill, my boy? why it's er—er—am—say, don't ask such foolish questions."

Few stop to consider that three most interested in the bill and responsible for its life are all Virginians, President Wilson, Senator Owens, and Representative Glass.

Woodrow Wilson was born at Staunton, Va., in 1856. Robert L. Owen, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, was born at Lynchburg, Va., in 1856. Carter Glass, chairman of the corresponding committee of the House, was born at Lynchburg, Va., in 1858.

Other men had much to do with the enactment of the new banking and currency law, but these three, born within 50 miles of each other, two of them in the same year, had the greatest responsibilities. One is President, elected from New Jersey; another is a senator from Oklahoma, a state not dreamed of in his youth, and the other, a representative, still lives in his native town.

In a country so vast and so new as this, fate plays many pranks, but in all its history there have been few coincidences more interesting.

RICHMOND CRITICIZED.

The Survey, a weekly newspaper published in New York City, says:

"One hundred thousand people and no public library. The reference is not to a congested foreign quarter in one of our great cities; nor to a new town in the British Northwest; nor to a mountain region of sparse settlements; nor down-at-the-heel farms. The reference is to the capital city of one of the original thirteen colonies of the American Commonwealth."

"No wonder the civic organizations of Richmond, Va., are beginning to take up the matter in earnest."

HUNGARIAN REVOLUTION.

The news that Count Czegenyi, who married Gladys Vanderbilt, is contemplating using some of the vast Vanderbilt fortune in financing all-American revolution if he can create a favorable attitude on the part of the United States Government will not be a surprise to those who have followed the activities of the Countess since her marriage. She has identified herself with her husband's people in a most remarkable manner. In a very short time she mastered the Hungarian language and speaks it so well that one can hardly believe she was born anywhere else. Although belonging to the most exalted aristocracy, she has identified herself with the needs of the common people and has lead every movement for their betterment.

The women of the aristocracy of Hungary are the most beautiful and fascinating in the world and no where are they more intelligent or masterful in all their activities. This is not confined to the upper classes but to masses as well. At the recent meeting of the International Suffrage Association held in Budapest peasant women in their quaint costumes, from the most remote parts of the country were present and made a great impression upon the visitors not only because of their intelligence but their earnestness and executive ability as well.

It is constant surprise to foreigners to find how intelligent the working woman is in Europe and how effectively she pleads her own cause upon the rare opportunities that come to her to voice her wishes.

KIDNEY TROUBLE FROM FEAR.

Harvard Professor Says Great Disaster Causes Disease.

Boston, Jan. 6.—For or anger may turn so much sugar into a man's blood as to give him fatal kidney trouble, said Walter B. Cannon, professor of physiology at Harvard, in a lecture at the Harvard Medical School today. Many great disasters, Professor Cannon declared were followed by outbreaks of kidney disease among survivors.

"Patients should take warning," he said, "that it is a very bad thing to make a child eat just after it has been in a tantrum."

WASHINGTON THEATRES.

Good Attractions at Belasco and Gayety Theatres.

Belasco—"Her Own Money." The play at the Belasco Theater this week is welcome as one of the pleasantest of the season. "Her Own Money," is entertainment which carries at the same time serious discussion of an important question, and through the sincere, intelligent work of Miss Julia Dean in the principal part, it rises to considerable emotional intensity. The financial relation of married people is the subject the dramatist has chosen, and he depicts with irrefutable truth the petty difficulties that become the cruel, if farcical, tragedy of so many married lives, all because "the firm" did not start on a business basis.

In Lew Alden and his wife it is shown that even the deepest and sincerest love could be almost wrecked because the husband did not understand why his wife hated to ask him for money—how she needed to feel independent—how she would deprive herself even to the point of pennies to save out of her allowance in order to have money of her own—and how she would even resort to subterfuge to keep him from knowing she had money to lend him in a crisis—all because she had learned that when people's "trusts" each other as married people do such loans are likely not to be repaid!

Gayety—"The Beauty Parade." It would be difficult to name all the reasons why "The Beauty Parade" which opened its week's engagement at the Gayety yesterday, is the best show that has visited the popular Ninth-street play house this season. An all-star cast, an unusually attractive comedy, an abundance of good comedy, and a number of songs of the whistling kind are a few of the reasons why the "Beauty Parade" deserves first honors.

Harry Fields, the inimitable Hebrew comedian, is a show in himself. He is responsible for most of the laughter, and his song specialty in the second act was the hit of the performance. The Countess Rossi, a living Parisian fashion model, displayed to their best advantage some of the most daring stage costumes seen here this year. She is a vivacious little woman, and it seems as if she is in all corners of the stage at the same time.

The chorus is the largest and most attractive seen here this season. The costumes are elaborate, and no less than a dozen changes are made during the show. Everything that goes to make up a good burlesque performance is found in the "Beauty Parade," and reflects a decided advance in the modern burlesque.
